Chiayi Park
Arboretum
Urban Jungle Park
Chiayi Park was established outside of the eastern suburbs of Chiayi in 1910. It was built according to the terrain. The park includes fountains, ponds, gardens, pavilions, and children's playgrounds. Filled with old trees and greenery, with a stream meandering through the grounds, it is a beautiful outdoor haven, perfect for leisure and recreation.

The century-old park contains a wealth of cultural and historical treasures. Wandering around the park, you will find that despite it being a green haven, there are also historical and cultural areas that offer a glimpse to artifacts from the Qing dynasty or tales of local legends. At the historical monument area, visitors can experience Japanese cultural elements with an abundance of diverse and integrative content. Inside the park, several treasured old trees and the "Taiwan Incense Cedar" tree cluster can also be found, showcasing the co-existence of the natural and cultural landscape.

In addition, the eastern side of Chiayi Park is connected to the Chiayi Arboretum, which is the most famous out of the top three exotic tropical arboretums in Taiwan. It contains tropical forests of tree species from the South Pacific Islands, Australia, and South America. The forests have retained their natural forms with plenty of insects and birds making it their home. The teeming habitat means that a walk within the forests is like returning to the embrace of mother nature, making the Arboretum a must-visit destination.

Chiayi Park is a park containing a diversity of facades, appealing on both the intellectual and emotional levels and sure to charm the visitors. Let’s relax and wander along the paths, as slow or as fast as you please, and explore this treasure trove.
Steam Locomotive No. 21
The first Alishan 28 ton steam locomotive was purchased from the US in 1912 and began Chiayi City’s journey to becoming the “timber city” of Taiwan.

Children’s Playground
It contains slides in a colorful flying saucer design as well as a vibrant floral-print fence so that children can feel as if they are in wonderland. Ideal for the entire family to have fun at.

Paintings by Tan Ting-pho
In 1926, the oil painting of Chiayi native Tan Ting-pho was selected for the Imperial Art Exhibition of Japan. He was the first Taiwanese artist to receive this honor. There are nine painting easels set up in the Park.

Arch Bridge
The bridge was built in 1918 and has withstood the trials of time. Its arched design spans across the stream, with pleasing architectural aesthetics.

Fountain Garden
The adorable Belgian “Manneken Pis” statue has been around for more than 70 years. It is also a popular photo destination.

Red-Brick Arcade
Minnan architectural elements have been incorporated into the public space to provide visual variation. The space can also be used as a hide-and-seek play area for children.

Fu Kang-An Victory Memorial Stele
It serves as a token that witnessed the change of the place name from “Zhuluo” to “Chaiyi” in 1787. It is a stele that combines both Manchu writing and Mandarin writing, rarely seen in Taiwan.

Yijiangshan Monument
The Battle of Yijiangshan Islands was an important historical incident that occurred after the KMT government took over Taiwan. The monument was established in the park in 1956.
02 Historical Monument Area, Historical Relic Museum

1 Children’s Playground
This playground may be small, but contains various facilities and equipment for children to have fun with. With a pirate ship slide, balance bar, and training facilities, it’s almost as good as a small amusement park.

2 Resting Area and Chozuya
After worship, the worshipers take a break at the "Resting Area"; the chozuya has basins for the worshipers to wash their hands in.

3 Shinto Shrine Avenue, Komainu, Stone Lanterns
Along the avenue leading to the Shinto Shrine, there are two stone sculptures of the Komainu (lion-dogs) placed on either side of the steps as symbols of protection. Stone lanterns are set up along either side of the avenue.

4 Historical Relic Museum (Temple Lodging House, Office)
Two wooden houses built in 1943 in the Japanese "Shoin-zukuri" style. The elegantly-designed buildings have already been officially declared as city monuments.

5 Chess Plaza
The only "Chess Plaza" in Taiwan, it is the largest outdoor competitive and leisure chess venue in the country. Not only is it used for promoting chess as a leisure activity, it is also a fun destination for parents and kids to relax.
Confucian Temple Cultural Area

1 Bingo Earthquake Monument
In remembrance of the severe earthquake in Chiayi that occurred in 1906, this was the first earthquake monument that was erected in Taiwan.

2 Twelve Ancient Cannons
Steel cannons forged in the Qing dynasty, possibly relics left over from the Chiayi City fort.

3 Confucian Temple
In major cities Confucian Temples are built for the worship remembrance of Confucius.

4 Temple Renovation Tablet
Stone tablet carved in 1815 that describes the construction and renovation of the Jhuluo Confucian Temple.

5 Seven Tigers of Jhuluo Bronze Sculpture
In 1970, the Chiayi City baseball little league won the National Little League once again. Chiayi is renowned for its “Seven Tiger” baseball team that entered the World League.

6 Shaking Koshien Bronze Sculpture
In 1931, the Chiayi Institute of Agriculture competed in a tournament in Japan’s Koshien Stadium and took home second-place from the Nippon National Middle School Baseball Championship.
04 Chiayi Tower Cultural Area

1 Precious Old Trees
Near the Chiayi Tower can be found groups of precious old trees including Japanese black pine, mahogany, and Taiwan incense-cedar. The monuments and the old trees create a complementary scene.

2 Formosan Clouded Leopard Bronze Sculpture
The Formosan clouded leopard has a brightly-colored coat and is highly agile. The sculpture is a symbol of protection.

3 Sun-Shooting Tower (Chiayi Tower)
Its design is based on the Alishan Sacred Tree, the body of the tower is decorated with the totems of the Indigenous tribal legend "Sun-Shooting"; the tower has a height of 62 m and has become a new landmark of Chiayi City.

4 Max Liu Sculptures
Max Liu was known as someone who was "young at heart", his works are filled with the vitality from the natural environment. The theme of this piece is "mother bird protecting her young".

5 Walled Arcade
The Arcade follows the terrain and uses red bricks to express Minnan architectural elements, where the gate, arches, and cloud walls are combined together to express its unique features.

6 First-Generation Chiayi Shinto Shrine Ruins
It was built in 1915 and designed and supervised by the famous craftsman Ito Mitsuru from Nagoya, where five deities were invited from the Taiwan Grand Shrine.
Chiayi Park Arboretum is also known as the Shanziding Botanical Garden. It was founded in 1909 next to Chiayi Park. Due to the geographical features of the Tropic of Cancer that runs through Chiayi, in the early days, hundreds of economic tree species from the South Pacific and tropical regions around the world were introduced to the Park for the study of tropical plants as well as to form the core forest. These include the Para rubber tree, Amboyna wood, blackboard tree, and mahogany. Currently, the species in the park are classified into 62 families and 175 classes, where block planting is used for the trees.

Under the jurisdiction of the Taiwan Forestry Research Institute, Chiayi Park Arboretum is the third oldest botanical garden in Taiwan and also the largest out of the three exotic tropical arboretums in Taiwan. In the beginning, it was used for the academic research and cultivation of tropical tree species. As it received a certain level of control and protection, after a century, the Arboretum has become a rarely seen urban botanical garden.

The Arboretum has two entrances, the main entrance is on Minquan Road; while going eastward from the Chiayi City skating rink, along the residential area can be found the side entrance to the Arboretum, which is also connected to the main pathway of the the Park. Along either side of the main pathway are tall Cuban royal palms. The stately and beautiful scenery often attracts wedding parties to take photos here or family with young children to relax under the trees. Visitors often also come here to relax and enjoy the essence of the forest.

Para Rubber Tree Area

In the early days, the Arboretum served as an experimental cultivation area for rubber trees and thousands of rubber trees were planted here. The sap of rubber trees is a high-quality raw material for rubber, and during WWII, the trees were important wartime strategic resources.

Buttress Root Plant Area

Pass the bomb shelter (former Civil Defense Control Center), on the right can be found the Buttress Root Plant Area. Some of the plant species include the looking-glass mangrove, Honduran mahogany, elephant apple, Amboyna wood, and breadfruit. Due to the growth environment, buttress root plants have evolved board-shaped roots over time to become a unique feature of tropical plants.

Palm Tree Area

On the left-hand side of the pathway are palm species, such as the solitary fishtail palm, golden cane palm, spindle palm, and Chinese fan palm. Members of the palm family are elegant and graceful in form, making them popular plants for gardens, schools, and parks. If row planting or block planting is used in an open space, the resultant landscape is usually stately and elegant.

Hoop Pine Area

The hoop pine is native to Australia, with a beautiful form and is an effective wind shelter. The timber can be used for constructions and for building furniture. To the left of the small bridge is the plaque with the words "Linchang Fengqing" (Forest with Clear Breeze), lauded as one of the eight sceneries of Chiayi. The two trees in front of the wooden hut office were the two specimen saplings first introduced to Taiwan. The subsequent saplings cultivated from the two trees have been distributed around Taiwan. The two trees are known as the "Mothers of Taiwan Hoop Pine."

Maple-Leafed Bayur Tree Area

Go past the ecological pool and continue along the right towards the wooden pathway; the maple-leafed bayur tree can be found on the left. It is indigenous to India and Southeast Asia, with oval leaves that are irregularly lobed, similar to maple leaves. Inside the fruit can be found "winged seeds", hence the tree is called winged seed tree in Chinese.
6 Oil Palm Area and Forest Bath Area

Go behind the wooden hut and walk along the trail there - along the trail can be found oil palms indigenous to Africa. The fruits are the main source of industrially-produced oil. Continue down the trail and it will lead to the longer Forest Bath path. Along the path are old trees, meandering streams, insect and bird calls, and the rich "essence" of the forest. Wander along slowly, relax and let your body and soul unwind.

7 Ecological Pond

The Ecological Pond provides a diverse habitat for microorganisms, water plants, and aquatic animals. Some of the water plants include aquatic plants, underwater plants, emergent water plants, floating-leaf plants, and floating plants.
